THURSDAY, DECEMBER 1, 1892 When worth and voice, and heart are The poet has his work begun; But when these three are not in place, A well might bard his shadow chase. Great Homer, Milton, all the train Forged with these three the golden chain Of soul-lit fancies that have bound The lofty thought to sweetest sound. Fair-haired Europa, on her reed With these made music down the mead; And young Columbia long may rest Content with the secrets she possessed? With these three unit parts of song Is left the epic line that long Shall lead the nations to the light
